

Rocket Man (Roatan-PUB Book 1)

Rocket Man Reminiscences of a career as a real life Rocket Man spanning over 15 years involved with the British National Space Programme As a Senior Experimental Officer with the University of Leicester Space Research Group, engaged as an engineering interpreter to assist with the aims and objectives of scientists and astronomers by helping with the design and build of scientific rocket payloads. The culmination of this work was to accompany the rockets to the launch sites in remote parts of the world and fire them into space for a few minutes of glory, during which they searched the heavens in their mission of investigating the cosmos. Some personal and human recollections whilst engaged with over of a dozen rocket payloads, meeting and working with a future Space Shuttle Astronaut and becoming life long friends with some of the keenest brains in astrophysics in the UK. The reminiscences cover anecdotal events whilst building the payloads, and recollections of the operations of a long gone era of a former "British Institution" when working in Woomera, South Australia between 1966 and 1978.
